Illustrated by Jo Ann Kairys and Frank Thompson

Does the sun ride roller coasters? Take bubble baths? Teach fireflies to shine? To help her little sister Leen fall asleep at bedtime, YaYa tells hilarious tales about the Sun's magical adventures. Skeptical Leen challenges YaYa's silly stories and won't go to sleep! With sheer delight, she invents her own surprising story twists to help her stay awake until sunrise.

The girls interact with wonder and unbounded imagination. If the Sun can hop on a roller coaster, anything is possible!

But there's more than make-believe...

Facts about the real Sun, contributed to the book by NASA's Chief Technologist, help children understand the Sun's vital importance in our universe.

PRAISE FOR SUNBELIEVABLE

Sunbelievable is the recipient of five national book awards for excellence in storytelling and distinctive illustrations: Mom's Choice Gold/FirstPlace; Purple Dragonfly/First Place; Royal Dragonfly/First Place; Indie Excellence; and the Florida Publishers Association.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Jo Ann Kairys has 20 years of experience as a medical/science writer published in leading medical journals. She began writing and illustrating children's books, inspired by her grandchildren and extensive work travels in Russia and Central and Eastern Europe.

Daniel Kairys, MD is father to three young children and an avid read-aloud dad. As a general surgeon in south central FL, he serves a large multicultural community. He was among the first responders to Haiti's devastating earthquake in 2010.

Jo Ann and her son Daniel co-authored Sunbelievable.
